

WINSTON CHURCHILL'S PERFORMANCE APPRAISAL:

"As an administrator, (he) has been cautious to excess....He reads only to prepare his speeches and has no other artistic tastes.

On the other hand, he is easy of approach and his heart is in his work; he listens to everyone, even though he cannot grasp all that is said to him; in fine, he is an excellent subaltern: capable, industrious, and supremely courageous, but not a pathfinder or a great leader of men."

—

Winston Churchill described by Frank Harris, Contemporary Portraits. Mellwood, N.Y.: Reprints & Periodicals Division of Kraus Organization, 1920.